Workshop Focuses on Health Impact

There was great participation from technical, community and policy stakeholders along the Corridor at the Health Impact Assessment workshop March 13 at Globe University in Woodbury.

What impacts our health? And what do we spend money on to increase health? These questions are being explored during a year-long Health Impact Assessment that engages the community in the conversation.

Public outreach was conducted earlier this year to help identify indicators that can be monitored toward public health goals. Some of the indicators that scored the highest, like having sidewalks, pertain to mobility.

transportation options for the area along Interstate 94 in the eastern metro of the Minneapolis-Saint Paul region. The Commission is comprised of local elected officials and business leaders. The Commission in early 2013 identified a preferred route for a fixed-guideway alternative in the Gateway Corridor. In 2014, a locally preferred alternative was approved including the selection of bus rapid transit as the mode. The project seeks to improve transit service from the Union Depot in Saint Paul to the eastern metro, while providing a focal point for more concentrated development as the region grows.
